A Railway Employe's Insurance Company Upon Which There is a Bad Report.

VERDICT FOR BIG MONEY.

A Jerseyman Fleeced on the Train-Judge NcCulloch's New Marringe Rule-Court and Police News.

A Suspected Swindle. The agent of what is alleged to be The Railway Employes' Benevolent association," St. Louis, is in the city. His name could not be learned, but he has been traced from place to place among the railway men soliciting patronage. His circulars reached here several days ago, making the following gauzy promise: "The Railway Employes' Benevolent association hereby promises and agrees, that after due notice and satisfactory proof of the death of a member has been received at the office of said association and within ninety days after the receipt of said proof, to make an assessment up-on every member holding a certificate of benefits in this association as per pro-rata table, and to pay beneficiaries all of the money collected on said assessment (less the actual cost of making said assessment) not to exceed Three Thousand Dollars." This is followed by a string of stipulations, figures, etc. It may be all right, but as assessment insurance companies are undesirable at best, and this concern promises only to pay what it can collect, railroad men are advised to exercise their closest discretion in giving it business. On receipt of one of the circulars, a very prudent employe of the Union Pacific wrote to the Missouri secretary of state, and received the following reply, which speaks officially:

CITY OF JEFFERSON, MO., 1

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Feb. 6, 1886. DEAR SIR: The association to which you refer is incorporated in this state, but this gives no assurance of its character or solvency. Any kind of an association under the name o, religious or benevolent can be incorporated in this state on nothing either prospective or expectant. The association is not incorporated as an insurance company hence has none of the assurances of insurance companies. I had an inquiry a few days ago from Council Bluffs, I think, about this organization, where one of the members died and there was some delay about the payment of his benefit. I sent it to the State Insurance department at St. Louis for answer. That and like associations are boycotted by the insurance department of this state and my advice to you is to steer clear of the concern. It has no standing for solvency or fair-dealing, as far as 1 know. It was incorporated October 24, 1885, 1 have forwarded your inquiry to Alfred Carr, Esq., superintendent state insurance department, St. Louis. He will answer it more fully,

Yours very truly, MICH'L K. McGRATH, Secretary State. This is an important matter as such a concern could operate an extensive swin-dle if so intending unless its proposed victims were forewarned

TANGLED LITIGATION.

The Case of Thomas vs. Forbes at Last Decided.

The jury in the case of Lewis Thomas vs. Geo. W. Forbes, came in yesterday with a verdict of $3,229 for the plaintiff. This case has been on trial in the district court for the past week and presents many points of interest. The defendant was ably represented by Messrs, Doane and Sawyer, while John L. Webster appeared for the plaintiff.

Ten years ago Lewis Thomas and George Forbes were residents of Douglas county. Thomas had a mortgage of $1,200 on his farm, a valuable piece of property in the western part of the county. He applied to Forbes to take another mortgage on the farm and absorbed in the county. advance him $2,000 or $3,000 on it. Forbes replied that he had no money himself, but had a rich uncle in the east, who would undoubtedly take the mortgage as security for the loan. The mortgage as security for the loan. The mortgage papers were accordingly drawn up and placed in the hands of Forbes, who in turn transferred them to his rich "nunky," a gentleman by the name of Vorge. Now Forbes, it appears, was some $10,000 in debt to his rich relative, and when the latter secured the mortgage, instead of turning $2,650 over to his nephew to be given to Mr. Thomas he placed that amount to the credit of his (Forbes') account. So that Mr. Thomas, who had executed the mortgage on his own farm, was left out in the cold, and his so-called friend, Forbes, was in pocket more than $2,000 by the deal. Shortly after Forbes left Douglas county and went out to the Black Hills. The mortgage on Thomas' farm held by Vorce was foreclosed, and thus Mr. T. was left almost penniless.

He at once brought suit-against Forbes to recover the value of his farm, on the ground that Forbes secured the mortgage under false pretenses. As above men-tioned, he at last secured a verdict for

The counsel for the defense made the point that as Forbes had once been de clared a bankrupt no claim against him contracted at the time could be collected. Their position, in this respect, however, was not sustained by either the judge or

Judge McCulloch's New Regulations For Marriage Licenses,

Judge McCulloch, of the county court, has declared a new and interesting regulation in the proceedure of obtaining license to marry. It has heretofore been required merely that the aspirant to conjugal blessedness should appear before some justice of the peace and make affidavit to his eligibility under the law, viz: that he was twentyone years of age, etc. This affidavit could be sent to the county court by any messenger chosen and a license obtained. The judge has now made it requisite that the male party to a marriage contract shall appear before him in person and reaffirm the substance of his affidavit. The justices have been instructed accordingly.

Judge McCulloch has also revised the form of the affidavit and inserted a clause in which the applicant takes oath that he has not been divorced within six months. Under the laws of Nebraska one cannot re-enter matrimony within an interval of six months after securing a divorce from a former alliance, except by guilt of felony, punishable with imprisonment.

Judge McCulloch explains his present departure as a step necessitated by the reckless manner into which the assumption of marriage vows has fallen, and the suspicion that the loose laws have admitted of several violations. He points to the accumulating divorce action piled on the equity docket as a per-fect proof that such sacred obligations as those of marriage need the protection of more stringent laws.

PROMISED REFORM.

A Young Lady Who Says She Will Do Better in the Future.

Justice Anderson combines with a fair knowledge of law and ability to crack the toughest legal nuts, the qualifications of a good lecturer on moral ethics. Yesterday afternoon his talents in the latter direction were brought into play.

Young Miss Tillie Stans, a 15-year-old girl, remarkably bright and handsome, was arrested at the instance of her father, Paul Staas, on the ground that she was unruly and undutiful, and fast becoming tough.
Tillie, it seems, is inclined to be a wee bit wild. She goes away from home at all hours of the day and night, keeps company with young men and young women whose character is not of the best. She is passionately fond of dancbest. She is passionately fond of dancing and keeps very late hours to the dismay of her parents, and occasionally, it seems, forgets to come home at all. The other day she was told by her parents that she must reform, unless she wanted to go to the bad completely. She didn't like plain talk of this sort and accordingly determined to hire out as a servant. She soon grew hire out as a servant. She soon grew tired of menial work, however, and sought another style of living. Yester-day her father, learning of her whereabouts, had her arrested, as above men-

The father, mother and daughter assembled in the court room, and a reconciliation was fully effected, the girl agreeing to return home to her parents and a life of virtue. Justice Anderson then mounted his throne and lectured the young lady on the subject of being an obedient and dutiful child to her father and mother, and the evil consequences of straying from the path of rectitude. The girl burst into tears and promised reform, and father, mother and daughter left the court room

To eat a the preceding year, and I think that the celebration of 1886 will far exceed all former efforts. These pageants are got-ten up by M set of men known as the 'Mystic Crewe.' No one knows who be-'Mystic Crewe.' No one knows who belongs to the organization, not even the members, themselves. The 'Mystic Crewe' is ruled by a leader known as the 'Rex,' or king, who serves for one year only, and then, after appointing his successor for the next carmval, retires. The appointment is, of course, never made public, and only two men ever know the identity of the 'Rex'—) the appointee and his predecessor. All the members are sworn to eternal secrecy. the members are sworn to eternal secrecy, and are never known to talk about the affairs of the "crewe," so that every movement of the order is kept perfectly veiled. Some time before the Mardi Gras celebration, each member who is to par ticipate in the parade receives a mysteri ous missive, which is thrown under his door some fine morning. It contains an order for him to appear for the parade in such and such a costume at a place and time named. This is signed by the Rex, and of course the subject is bound to obey implicity, on pain of instant and irrevocable expulsion. One gran fea-ture of the evening is the Mardi Gras ball at which the members of the "crewe" appear in the costumes used in the parade, while the invited guests also appear enmasque. At a given signal every one retires, masks and returns in such a way that no one knows who are the members of the "crew" and who are the guests. I should say that the cost of each year's carnival, was at least $150,000 or $200,000, perhaps more. All the costumes are purchased new every year—nothing oid is used. W. F. Montgomery, St. Louis.—"I have traveled extensively all over the south for the past ten or fifteen years, and from my observations I am led to a tlrm belief that the yellow fever is becomingless and less to be dreaded in our southern clime. Certain it is we have had no visitation of "Yellow Jack" since the terrible scourge of 1878. Since that time the local epidemics have been light, and easily handled. Take my native city, Charleston, South Carolina, for instance. We have had no yellow fever there for many years, and even in '78 the epidemie hardly phased Charleston. Years back I can remember the time when the "brazen king" was a subject of the continual dread of our people. The same observation will apply to other southern cities. How do I account for this? In a general way by a change in climate which I think is taking place that the southern winter is becoming more and more severe. For the past few years the change has been very noticea-ble. How misschange is being made, I can't say, but I am confident that it is ### taking place, "AUGEAN STABLES."

The Great Austitution to be Planted Near Omaha.

Messrs Mendelssohn & Fisher have the contract for a wonderful piece of work. At a certain point not far from Omaha there will be built one of the largest live stock feeding stables in the west. Who the parties backing this great enterprise may be, and where the location they have selected is something which "no fellow can find out." For reasons best known to themselves they choose to withhold the facts for the present. Nevertheless, the architects are perfecting the plans and executing the drawings for feeding stables, 204 feet wide by 682 feet long, with 3,000 stalls. In connection with this a residence for superintendent will be built with office building, barns, cribs, etc.—all the neces sary adjuncts for a mammoth live-stock hostelry, as it were. As mystical as are the guiding spirits of this great enterprise, and as mysterious as is the selected site, the promise that it will be near Omaha must be a source of great satisfaction to the growing pride of the city.

The work will be completed, in all probability, before next winter.

Points of a Good Milker.

A good milker must be able to eat a great deal of food. Milk cannot be made without something to make it from. The cow does not secrete milk from the air, great deal a cow must have a strong jaw, and we may put this down as one of the marks of a good milker. A strong jaw does not necessarily require a big head, at least what is called a bull's head, large in the upper part, but a strong lower jaw, with strong muscles to operate it. Any expansion of the head in other directions may be a detriment as drawing from her food to support it.

A good milker must digest a great deal of food. This requires an ample stomach or stomachs, for the cow has four. A large stomach is indicated externally by a large abdomen and great breadth be-tween the hips, or great breadth of loins. A judge of cows will tell you that a cow should be wedge-shaped, tapering from abdomen to nose.

A good milker will have large veins—that is, large veins leading to the udder, under the belly. Those large veins indi-

Whether what is called the escutcheon, the portion of the hind part of the udder and adjacent parts on which the hairs ture back in opposition to the general di-rection of the hair, is any indication of the cow is a disputed question. Many believe that where it is large it indicates a good milker; where small, a poor one. Others put no faith in it.

A soft, velvet feeling of the skin, and a rich, yellow color, especially in the inside of the ears, is believed to indicate a rich milker, at least, if not a large one. It is believed to show a tendency to fat, and consequently butter.

Bohemian Oats.

"Bohemian Oats,
"Bohemian" oats, so named doubtless because of the migratory disposition of the slick customer who sells them, is a matter of much trouble to the innocent granger in this and other states. He is told that they will bring $7.50 a bushel for seed, but finds to his oring $7.00 a bushel for seed, but finds to his infinite disgust that they possess no value for manufacturing into meal for table purposes, and are less profitable than the ordinary varieties. Notwithstanding they cost $10 a bushel and are destitute of bulls and have a greater proportion of meat they are not rich enough to satisfy the ordinary rustic it. enough to satisfy the ordinary rustic, it seems.—[The Millstone.

It seems amazing that these swindlers can continue to find dapes, notwithstanding the expose of their rascality by the press generally. Why do not farmers read the papers a little more? Bohemian oats and skinless oats known for more than half a century as a curiosity, but worthless from the fact that, being destitute of hulls, they drop as easily as buck-wheat when ready for harvest. Oats without hulls may be bought of any seeds-man. But why buy them? If any man talks skinless oats by any name put him off the farm. The American Forestry Congress.

Advance sheets of the proceedings of the American Forestry congress contain much matter of interest. It is well-known—at least among that class who keep posted upon agricultural science— that forests conserve moisture, equalize rainfall, and that to reach the best results in cultivation not less than 10 per cent of the area of a country, equally distribu-ted, should be in trees. The French say 25 per cent, but this is where the timber s in large bodies.

The statistical parts of the volume and the general demands made for forests preservation, together with papers on utilization of timberman's waste in manufacturing charcoal, and the more novel proposition to use it as a fertilizer, and the discussion of means to diminish losses by fire, demonstrate that economy with present forest resources is first of all to be attained. The encouragement of the aims of the society in general work may well be considered a patriotic task. B. E. Fernow is the secretary of the association, 13 Burling Stip, New York.

Whatever else is essential in making a successful feeder, it is certain that care fulness is more necessary, and a kind sympathy with the animal's condition is almost equally so. It is not a sign of a good feeder to see him throw out feed promiseuously to the animals, without reference to their requirements, whether they eat it or not, or to their condition, whether in health or out of health. Frozen apples can be restored easily by putting them in ice water (not well water, for that is too warm), and allow them to thaw out slowly. If so treated they will be as fine as they were before being frozen. When the apples are frozen in bulk, cover up well with blankets and allow no air to circulate in the room, and the apples usually thaw out with but little injury. Rapid thawing ruins them.

Whatever objection may be urged against ensilage by some, a visit to those farms upon which it is fed during the cold weather, when nothing but the dry provender can be had, will convince any one that even if the ensilage was not all that is claimed for it, the change from dry to succulent matter is gratefully accepted by the stock. It is admitted that ensilage is a valuable acquisition, but, like everything else, its quality depends upon its preparation and the manner in which it has been preserved. Inferior ensilage like inferior hay, will not give satisfaction.

The farmer who has a store of potatoes should watch them about this season o the year to see that rot does not get in its work. It cannot always be prevented, but a dusting of air-slacked lime through them often prevents it, or checks it after it has started. In the later case, they should be promptly sorted over, all dis-eased or affected ones, taken out and well dusted with lime as each layer is returned to the bin.

Sheep fatten most rapidly at 2 and 3 years old, says a contemporary. By feeding rich fodder one year old sheep will increase in weight more rapidly than when older. While they will fatten also at this age, the flesh is not esteemed as when older, as it is more watery. Lambs taken very young and fed high are fat-tened and made very palatable. But when fattened for profit, as well as other animals, should be matured in growth
